COURSE DESCRIPTION

For rheumatology and medicine in general it holds true that only well-educated and well-trained medical doctors can comprehensively and rapidly translate recent advances into clinical medicine to achieve the best clinical outcomes that improve the quality of our patients' lives. Therefore, education and training are necessities for success. At the same time, they represent a complex matter since modern and effective training methods and techniques are used to continuously teach new facts, theories and book-knowledge, refresh memories, and gain and improve practical skills.

In this regard, our 4th EULAR Autumn Course has been designed to explore new avenues in education by purposely mixing modern teaching formats. Our course aims to provide insights into several different diagnostic and therapeutic aspects of the modern management of RMDs but also addresses current controversies in these fields through a series of interactive debates, round-table discussions, workshops, and seminars.

In this unique 2-days course, attendees will have an opportunity to network and have intensive interactions with experts in the field in Meet the Expert sessions. They will also be able to discuss with the main authors of recently published EULAR recommendations about the way they were developed and listen to authors who have recently published important articles talk about their work. The interactive and open way of discussion will permit to participants to present their own ideas and ask questions during round table discussions. Evaluation and feed-back from participants and instructors will be collected in order to further optimise future events designed in this modern teaching format.

Learning objectives

- To discuss with experts the latest information in the field of frequent or rare diseases, like gout, VEXAS syndrome, fibromyalgia and Behcet's disease.
- To gain experience in treating RMD patients in special situations (elderly, pregnancy).
- To update their knowledge in rebranding an old drug or to find the latest data about new ways of treating rheumatic conditions.
- To understand the way in which EULAR recommendations are developed and use.
- To discuss latest articles with practical impact in the field of rheumatology.
- To celebrate 75 years of steroid treatment in rheumatology and provide current information's about patterns of prescription and way to use of them in different situations.
- To reflect on the role of medical humanities in building a doctor.
- To enhance collaboration within the EULAR network in all fields of rheumatology.
