COURSE DESCRIPTION

For rheumatology and medicine in general it holds true that only well-educated and well-trained medical doctors can comprehensively and rapidly translate recent advances into clinical medicine to achieve the best clinical outcomes that improve the quality of our patients' lives. Therefore, education and training are necessities for success. At the same time, they represent a complex matter since modern and effective training methods and techniques are used to continuously teach new facts, theories and book-knowledge, refresh memories, and gain and improve practical skills.

In this regard, our 5th EULAR Autumn Course has been designed to explore new avenues in education by purposely mixing modern teaching formats. Our course aims to provide insights into several different diagnostic and therapeutic aspects of the modern management of RMDs.

In this unique 2.5-days course, attendees will have an opportunity to network and have intensive interactions with experts in the field in Meet the Expert sessions. They will also be able to discuss with the main authors of recently published EULAR recommendations about the way they were developed and listen to authors who have recently published important articles talk about their work. The interactive and open way of discussion will permit to participants to present their own ideas and ask questions during round table discussions. Evaluation and feedback from participants and instructors will be collected in order to further optimise future events designed in this modern teaching format.

Learning objectives

- To discuss with experts the latest information in the field of common or rare diseases, like CPPD crystal deposition, IgG4 related disease, eosinophilic granulomatosis with polyangiitis (EGPA) and PMR.
- To update their knowledge in treating lung involvement in RMDs and neuropsychiatric SLE.
- To gain experience in assessing the cancer risk in autoimmune disease and the development of RMDs after the use of immune checkpoint inhibitors.
- To understand the way in which EULAR recommendations are developed and used.
- To discuss latest articles with practical impact in the field of rheumatology.
- To reflect on the role of medical humanities in building a doctor.
- To enhance collaboration within the EULAR network in all fields of rheumatology.
